While you won't need to style your curly hair much with your new haircut, you'll want to review your hair care routine and ensure that you have plenty of moisturizing products on hand to keep your curly hair vendors looking healthy. According to Swinney's recommendations, it is critical to keep curly hair moisturized during the colder months of the year. She advises against the use of products that contain alcohol because, according to her, they can be drying. If you have short to medium-length hair vendors, this will look best on you, and it will work for our wannabe blondes all year long, including during the winter months.
